Bachelor of Arts with a Major in Philosophy and Religious Studies

Each program in the department has numerous desired outcomes. Students will be able to do the following:

Selected Educational Outcomes (Philosophy Track)

- 1. Explain and analyze central issues, topics, and philosophers in the history of philosophy, from the ancient to the modern periods.
- 2. Write and speak critically and logically, applying various theories to specific cases and examples.
- 3. Explain their own value system, evaluating their values in the context of a diverse range of ideas that inform contemporary controversies and social conflict.
- 4. Create independent philosophical research, synthesizing a variety of sources, including traditional primary philosophical texts and secondary source commentaries.
- 5. Demonstrate a working familiarity with current research methods, citation styles, and presentation techniques.

Selected Educational Outcomes (Religious Studies Track)

- 1. Explain and interpret the world's religious traditions and their influence on values, norms, and public policies.
- 2. Apply critical and analytical skills in analyzing multiple religious perspectives.
- 3. Identify and evaluate their self-understanding in the context of diverse ideas that inform contemporary controversies and social conflict.
- 4. Create independent research, synthesizing sources including sacred texts, religious autobiographies, and other secondary sources.
- 5. Demonstrate a working familiarity with current research methods, citation styles, and presentation techniques.

Examples of Outcome Assessments (Philosophy Track and Religious Studies Track)

The department assesses the extent to which the program requirements create the desired outcomes by using a variety of techniques. Examples of these assessments (and related educational outcomes) include the following:

- 1. The on-going evaluation of student examinations and research papers using rubrics, comparing quantitative data over time.
- 2. Exit surveys to be administered to each student completing work for the major.
- 3. Exit examinations administered during the senior Metaphilosophy/Religious Studies Capstone combined course.
- 4. Surveys of alumni to assess the relevancy of the program to their current work and their suggestions for refinements.
- 5. The use of university or external data that may become available to assess the quality of the program and the performance of graduates.
